High School Decides To Have Live Tiger At Jungle-Themed Prom

He eventually slumped down against the metal bars with his back to the audience. After students posted videos of the distressed tiger on Facebook the next day, the situation was cruel to its students. According to Susan Bass, PR director for Florida's BIG CAT RESCUE, the tiger in the video belongs to a private company based in Homestead, Florida, that breeds other wild animals for parties. Its licensed by the USDA, but is not an accredited wildlife sanctuary or refuge. Bass said it's clear from the tiger's body language that he was frightened.
