Zookeeper Indicted In Murder-For-Hire Plot Accused Of Killing 5 Tigers "To Make Room For More" A federal grand jury has indicted a former zookeeper from Oklahoma of killing five tigers to make room for new arrivals, but the whole story is a lot more twisted. Joseph Maldonado-Passage, also known as Joe Exotic, owned and operated his own animal park in Wynnewood until he was arrested and charged with two counts of hiring a person to commit murder. His alleged target was Carole Baskin, the CEO of BIG CAT RESCUE, a nonprofit organization trying to educate the public about Maldonado-Passage's unethical practices. According to a statement by the group, Maldonado-Passage had responded to their attempts by changing the name of his traveling exhibit to BIG CAT RESCUE Entertainment, apparently seeking to make his business sound reputable through fraudulent association. After BIG CAT RESCUE won a $1 million copyright infringement lawsuit against Maldonado-Passage, the disgraced zookeeper lashed out in the form of numerous threats. In one post, he shared a video of himself shooting a blow-up doll dressed to look like Baskin in the head, in front of a banner with the organization's logo. Per details shared in a statement by the US Attorney's Office of the Western District of Oklahoma, Maldonado-Passage escalated his vendetta from symbolic harm to planning literal harm in 2016.

An Oklahoma Zookeeper Shot Five Tigers to Make Room for More Tigers

An Oklahoma Zookeeper Shot Five Tigers to Make Room for More Tigers The owner of a roadside zoo in Oklahoma phoned a local newsroom on Thursday and admitted to the killing of five endangered tigers. Joseph Maldonado-Passage, a 55 year-old man who goes by Joe Exotic, called KOCO 5 hours after a federal grand jury charged him with 19 wildlife crimes on top of two previous murder-for-hire counts. The zookeeper is currently jailed for allegedly seeking a hit on CEO of BIG CAT RESCUE, Carole Baskin, with whom he'd feuded over his mistreatment and exploitation of animals. Maldonado-Passage told KOCO 5 that he put five tigers to sleep because they were in pain, Maldonado-Passage told KOCO 5. They were in pain.

Carole Baskin better never, ever, ever see me face to face, Maldonado-Passage says to the camera before shooting the doll. Ever, ever, ever again. Baskin and BIG CAT RESCUE called Maldonado-Passage's business one of the most notorious cub petting roadside zoos in the country. The organization protested a show that Maldonado-Passage took throughout malls in the US. In retaliation, the zookeeper renamed his organization BIG CAT RESCUE Entertainment causing BIG CAT RESCUE to sue in 2011 for violating its intellectual property rights. In 2013, Baskin received a million dollar judgment against Maldonado-Passage. Baskin also archived Facebook conversations in which Exotic and other roadside zoo proprietors defended Maldonado-Passage's threats of violence.

Feds allege zookeeper Joe Exotic killed 5 tigers, illegally sold other endangered animals. Already facing federal charges for a murder-for-hire scheme, Joe Exotic now faces an additional 19 counts, including violations of the Endangered Species Act. Filed Wednesday in the Western District of Oklahoma, a second indictment alleges Exotic shot and killed five tigers in October 2017 and illegally sold other big cats and a lemur. Exotic is already in federal custody after federal prosecutors alleged he tried to hire a hitman to kill Carole Baskin, the CEO of Tampa, Florida-based BIG CAT RESCUE. The Endangered Species Act makes it illegal to "take" any endangered species within the U.S., meaning any attempt to harass, harm or capture said species. Exotic reportedly knew in October 2017 several big cats would arrive at his animal park for boarding and allegedly killed the five tigers to make room, according to the indictment.

Maldonado-Passage later tried to pay an undercover FBI agent to kill his target, court documents allege. The woman never harmed. The targeted woman was Carole Baskin, the CEO of BIG CAT RESCUE, according to a news release issued by the Florida animal rights nonprofit and big cat sanctuary after Maldonado-Passages arrest. The nonprofit criticized Maldonado-Passage for operating one of the most notorious cub petting roadside zoos in the country. In response to that criticism, Maldonado-Passage made threats for years against the rescue group and its leader including recording a video of himself shooting a blow up doll dressed to look like Carole, the group said. Maldonado-Passage's anger at BIG CAT RESCUE began after the nonprofit started to tell malls across the Southwest and Midwest that Maldonado-Passage would bring tiger cubs that the cubs were leading miserable lives, BIG CAT RESCUE said. Maldonado-Passage encouraged malls to drop the traveling tiger exhibits, according to the nonprofit. But then Maldonado-Passage renamed his exhibit BIG CAT RESCUE Entertainment in a bid to trick others into thinking BIG CAT RESCUE itself was operating the petting zoo, which led to an intellectual property rights lawsuit in which BIG CAT RESCUE was awarded $1 million. The Washington Post reported earlier this year. Maldonado-Passage was livid. For Carole and all of her friends that are watching out there, if you think for one minute I was nuts before, I am the most dangerous exotic animal owner on planet earth right now, Maldonado-Passage said in a video, according to the Post.

Here's The Best Thing To Do With Your Leftover Jack-O'-Lanterns

Rescued chickens checking out a pumpkin | Woodstock Farm Sanctuary If folks want to donate their pumpkins, they can be carved but can't have candle residue in them or show any signs of rotting, Lizz DeFeo, Woodstock Farm Sanctuary marketing manager, told The Dodo. Fully intact pumpkins or carved is totally OK though! Maggie the pig smiling over a donated pumpkin | Little Buckets Farm Sanctuary If there's a wildlife sanctuary in your area, like BIG CAT RESCUE in Tampa, Florida, or Black Beauty Ranch in Murchison, Texas, rescued tigers or even bears might end up with leftover pumpkins. [embedded content] Aside from donating pumpkins to rescue groups, people in more rural areas may also choose to leave one or two carved pumpkins in the woods or their backyards as a snack for any passing squirrels, chipmunks, or deer. Big Cats Play With Pumpkins Every Year For Enrichment & The Videos Are Beyond Sw

Nov 1 2018 01:39PM

Just as we give domestic pets toys, scratching posts, behavioral training and walks, animals kept in human care rather than in the wild need stimulation to keep them happy. It's a strong part of wild animal husbandry in zoos, sanctuaries and other environments worldwide. Pumpkins are part of a year-round program for big cats, according to SUSAN BASS, director of public relations for the Big Cat Sanctuary in Tampa, Florida, which houses a huge variety of big cat species from caracals and ocelots to jaguars. "Big cats in captivity are bored silly, so at BIG CAT RESCUE, we provide them with enrichment items every day to help keep them mentally stimulated," Bass tells Bustle. "That includes holiday enrichment items like pumpkins during October each year." BIG CAT RESCUE on YouTube "Environmental enrichment includes the regular provision of dynamic environments, cognitive challenges and social opportunities," says animal care organization Wild Welfare. "An enriched environment should promote a range of normal behaviours [sic] that animals find rewarding as well as allowing animals to positively respond to potential stressors." A lot of the need for enrichment in captivity comes from the fact that captive animals don't experience the stresses they would in the wild. "In captivity, food and water is supplied, territory is already delineated, social groupings are usually fairly stable and structured, there are no predators to avoid, and quite often mates are selected for them," notes Colchester Zoo.

Some of our cats even like to "drown" their pumpkins in their pools! It's a fun way to keep them mentally healthy," Bass says. BIG CAT RESCUE on YouTube Big cats are natural predators and very curious, and pumpkin flesh itself is particularly harmful to felines but it's important to note that the jaguars and other cats who are being given pumpkins are treating them as playthings, not as food sources. (They're pretty well-fed at all times.) If you want to imitate this trick at home with your bored housecat, get it a pumpkin-shaped catnip toy and watch it experience the seasonal joy.

Zookeeper Indicted In Murder-For-Hire Plot Accused Of Killing 5 Tigers "To Make Room For More" Nov 12 2018 11:51

Zookeeper Indicted In Murder-For-Hire Plot Accused Of Killing 5 Tigers "To Make Room For More" A federal grand jury has indicted a former zookeeper from Oklahoma of killing five tigers to make room for new arrivals, but the whole story is a lot more twisted. Joseph Maldonado-Passage, also known as Joe Exotic, owned and operated his own animal park in Wynnewood until he was arrested and charged with two counts of hiring a person to commit murder. His alleged target was Carole Baskin, the CEO of BIG CAT RESCUE, a nonprofit organization trying to educate the public about Maldonado-Passage's unethical practices. According to a statement by the group, Maldonado-Passage had responded to their attempts by changing the name of his traveling exhibit to BIG CAT RESCUE Entertainment, apparently seeking to make his business sound reputable through fraudulent association. After BIG CAT RESCUE won a $1 million copyright infringement lawsuit against Maldonado-Passage, the disgraced zookeeper lashed out in the form of numerous o threats. In one post, he shared a video of himself shooting a blow-up doll dressed to look like Baskin in the head, in of a banner with the organizations logo. Per details shared in a statement by the US Attorneys Office of the Western District of Oklahoma, Maldonado-Passage escalated his vendetta from symbolic harm to planning literal harm in 2016.

Feds allege zookeeper Joe Exotic killed 5 tigers, illegally sold other endangered animals Already facing federal charges for a murder-for-hire scheme, Joe Exotic now faces an additional 19 counts, including violations of the Endangered Species Act. Filed Wednesday in the Western District of Oklahoma, a second indictment alleges Exotic shot and killed five tigers in October 2017 and illegally sold other big cats and a lemur. Exotic is already in federal custody after federal prosecutors alleged he tried to hire a hitman to kill Carole Baskin, the CEO of Tampa, Florida-based BIG CAT RESCUE. The Endangered Species Act makes it illegal to "take" any endangered species within the U.S., meaning any attempt to harass, harm or capture said species. Exotic reportedly knew in October 2017 several big cats would arrive at his animal park for boarding and allegedly killed the five tigers to make room, according to the indictment.

Big Cats Play With Pumpkins Every Year For Enrichment & The Videos Are Beyond Sw

Nov 1 2018 01:39PM

Just as we give domestic pets toys, scratching posts, behavioral training and walks, animals kept in human care rather than in the wild need stimulation to keep them happy. It's a strong part of wild animal husbandry in zoos, sanctuaries and other environments worldwide. Pumpkins are part of a year-round program for big cats, according to SUSAN BASS, director of public relations for the Big Cat Sanctuary in Tampa, Florida, which houses a huge variety of big cat species from caracals and ocelots to jaguars. "Big cats in captivity are bored silly, so at BIG CAT RESCUE, we provide them enrichment items every day to help keep them mentally stimulated," Bass tells Bustle. "That includes holiday enrichment like pumpkins during October each year." BIG CAT RESCUE on YouTube "Environmental enrichment includes regular provision of dynamic environments, cognitive challenges and social opportunities," says animal captivity organization Wild Welfare. "An enriched environment should promote a range of normal behaviours [sic] that animals find rewarding as well as allowing animals to positively respond to potential stressors." A lot of the need for enrichment in captivity comes from the fact that captive animals don't experience the stresses they would in the wild. "In captivity, and water is supplied, territory is already delineated, social groupings are usually fairly stable and structured, there are no predators to avoid, and quite often mates are selected for them," notes Colchester Zoo.

Some of our cats even like to "drown" their pumpkins in their pools! It's a fun way to keep them mentally healthy," I says. BIG CAT RESCUE on YouTube Big cats are natural predators and very curious, and pumpkin flesh itself is particularly harmful to felines but it's important to note that the jaguars and other cats who are being given pumpkins are treated as playthings, not as food sources. (They're pretty well-fed at all times.) If you want to imitate this trick at home with your bored housecat, get it a pumpkin-shaped catnip toy and watch it experience the seasonal joy.
